I wish, if you can sense my thoughts,
Like a seer with a divine gift.
Ardent feelings in the depth of my heart,
Laze shrouded in the misty sprays of shyness.
Finding it hard to put my heart into mouth
I sought refuge, in the banks of silence.
Can you see through the misty showers
My real genuine thoughts?
Or can you wipe off the cloudy casing,
With the soft caressing warmth of your love?
Can you cast a spell on my tongue
And release the tangled letters,
Which embodies my emotions?

When reduced to nought;
The miles separating our spirits,
With one gaze into the glass of my eyes,
I'm sure, that you can read my mind.
And it is for such a mind reader
That I searched for all these years
And here I'm standing before you
To experience such a blissful joy.
